Six-Mile-Deep Water Port

An aerial photograph of a port development site. A paved road curves along the left side of the image. To the right of the road is a large, mostly empty paved area, possibly a parking lot or construction site, with some scattered debris and a small pond. Several buildings are visible, including a large yellow one and a smaller red one. A yellow crane is positioned near the red building. In the background, a body of water is visible, and the shoreline is lined with dense green trees. The overall scene suggests a port under development or in a state of disrepair.
